

From the Charleston Courier.
Gen. Jackson and the Charleston and Cincinnati Rail Road.

We expressed a strong doubt some time since, whether Gen. Jackson had declared himself hostile to this great enterprise, as stated in a Tennessee paper, and we are happy to learn from the following extract of a letter, received in this city, from a distinguished member of the Bar in Nashville, that our doubt was rightly entertained.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 28, 1836.
"With regard to Gen. Jackson's hostility to the Charleston and Cincinnati Rail Road, I do not believe there is any thing in it. The first intimation of the kind, which we heard here, was that he had expressed a decided hostility to the Road, somewhere in the Eastern part of this State, but his most intimate friends deny it. They state what I have no doubt is the fact, that he spoke rather doubtfully of its accomplishment; but so far from his conversation being hostile to the Road, directly the contrary was to be inferred. Had Gen. Jackson been at Knoxville during the session of the Convention, and witnessed the deep enthusiasm which pervaded that body, particularly the members from the South and West—and the fixed and resolute earnestness, with which they seemed to be imbued, I think all doubt as to its practicability or final accomplishment, would have vanished from his mind. It certainly is a stupendous, a magnificent undertaking. The history of our species has proved that natural obstacles, however apparently insurmountable, have been obliged to yield to the power of "man's mind." Who, forty years ago, would have believed that the immense products of the valley of the Mississippi would have been floated down on the bosom of that majestic stream, and the Manufactures of Europe and the products of the South returned in vessels, which seemed to stem the mighty torrent as if propelled by magic. Could it have been supposed 15 years ago, that the human mind could possibly have contrived any mode or means of travelling, by which the traveller at the end of 24 hours from his start, should find himself 3 or 400 miles from his starting point? When we see what has been done heretofore, is it not a guaranty that almost any thing can be accomplished hereafter? Fulton was denounced as a chimerical madman, yet he lived to see the stormy wave, overcome, by his invention. Columbus was derided as a hair-brained adventurer—a bedlamite—and though, in his life-time, he received 'chains for a crown—a prison for a world' yet the discovery of this mighty continent and the impetus it has given to the arts and sciences, and legislation, and its mighty effects upon the moral, social and political relations of mankind, have been the consequence of his 'hair-brained madness.' We live in an age of improvement. The mind of man is almost as boundless as space, and the effect of its powerful operations upon the future, cannot be even imagined. I trust, nay, believe, the day is not far distant when you and I shall see the smoke of the cars of the Charleston and Cincinnati Rail Road ascending to Heaven, and the products of the South and West whirling by each other in rapid succession."

OFFICIAL.
General Order, No. 61. } Head Quarters of the Army, }
Adjutant General's Office, }
Washington, Sept. 16, 1836 }

I. The Major General Commanding in Chief has received the official account of the attack made on the 21st of August, by Major Pierce, of the 1st Regiment of Artillery, on a large body of Indians collected at the site of old Fort Drane, in which, with a force of only 110 men, he completely surprised and routed about 300 warriors, and killed and wounded a considerable number of them.

II. The conduct of the officers and men engaged in this enterprise, like those who attacked a superior force at Micanopy, under the gallant and much lamented Lieutenant Colonel Heilman, is deserving of the highest praise.

III. It is with much satisfaction that the Major General recurs to the conduct, on all occasions, of the troops of the regular army, who have been serving in Florida, against the Seminoles. Wherever they have had an opportunity of meeting the enemy they have acted with a spirit of gallantry worthy of a nobler field; and the Major General cannot, without deep sensibility, contemplate the sacrifices and sufferings which they have experienced in the arduous duties imposed on them; all which they have borne with a fortitude and submission to discipline that reflects honor on the character of the American army, and entitles them to the approbation and regard of their government and country.

By order of
ALEXANDER MACOMB,
Major General Commanding in Chief
S. COOPER, Ad. Adj. Gen.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 3.
Mexico.—We have been favored with the sight of a letter from the interior of Mexico, in which it is said that a project is on foot to invite the northern states of the Republic of Mexico with the Republic of Texas under one Independent Government. The letter is dated Zacatecas, July 25th, 1836, and states that a disaffection through the northern provinces of Mexico is great and still increasing, and speaks of the advantages of an independent state like that of Texas. The states who appear to be in favor of an alliance with Texas, are Tamaulipas, San Luis, Zacatecas, a part of Jalisco, Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, Durango, Sinaloa, Chihuahua, Sonora, the territory of California, and New Mexico. The principle object of all these states appear to be that of forming a new republic in connection with Texas.

The division of Mexico is not a new design, and now under the many favorable circumstances, the empty treasury, the distraction reigning through the country, the present situation of Texas, and her inevitable independence, all tend to increase the probability of the project of an alliance between these states possible. The letter shows evidently that much good would be the result of the success of the design. It also confirms the information which we have given of the internal situation of Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7.
Rarely has our city, too fruitful in scenes of blood been marked by an occurrence more appalling and disastrous than that which signalised the night of the 5th.

It is painful to go into a brief review of the causes which led to these deplorable transactions, but it is our duty so to do, upon receiving such information as can be relied upon. Since the death of Mr. Brux by Giquel, a very considerable excitement has prevailed in our city against the latter, and was much augmented upon his being discharged from the confinement by giving bail.

Giquel it is known, was first brought before Judge Preval, one of the associate justices, who after hearing testimony, and the law bearing upon the subject gave his decision against the admission of Giquel to bail, who was then committed to prison to await his trial at the ensuing session of the Criminal Court. This decision whether just or not appeared at least to be a popular one, which however is by no means an unerring test of its soundness.

The decision of Judge Preval was based on the act of 1807, by which in capital offences, and some other enumerated ones, the accused was precluded from the benefit of bail.

Upon the failure of being admitted to bail by Judge Preval, the counsel for Giquel obtained a writ of habeas corpus, upon which he was brought before Judge Bermudez, he being empowered as a Judge of the Probate Court, to issue and determine on such process. After a long examination of witnesses, and a patient attention to counsel on both sides, Judge Bermudez, on Monday last, decided that the accused had a right to be admitted to bail, which was accordingly taken in the sum of $15,000, and Giquel discharged from confinement.

It was apparent that public feeling was still against the decision, and that some excitement was occasioned by it. Little however did we imagine that it would extend so far as to produce the lamentable results of Monday night. On this night it appears that some personal friends of Mr. Brux, who had been killed by Giquel, in company with several other individuals, feeling exasperated at the release of Giquel, and the Judge who had been the author of it, proceeded to the residence of Judge Bermudez, with a view to Lynch him, or to inflict some severe punishment upon his person.

They knocked at the door of his house, which, upon being opened by him, some individuals demanded if he were Judge Bermudez, and if he were, that he must come and go along or march with them. One of the individuals, Mr. Bailey, we are informed put his hands on the Judge, using some force, with a view to get him along, in consequence of which, a scuffle ensued, which resulted in the death of Mr. Bailey, he being stabbed with a sword. A Mr. Egan was at the same time engaged in the attack on the Judge, and was killed by the discharge of a double barreled gun, by a young man passing the night in the house of the Judge. Upon the death of these individuals, the others in front immediately left. These are in substance the particulars of this lamentable business, so far as we have heard. That two young men of fine prospects, who held a highly respectable standing in Society, with a large circle of relatives and friends to lament with bitterness their death, should have lent themselves in an evil hour to these most unfortunate and illegal measures, is to us a source of unaffected grief.—Bulletin

The Washingtonian, a penny paper, published in Washington city, contains an advertisement from a Col. Paimbeout, in which he gives notice that he has discovered a mode of preserving houses from fire without great expense, by painting them with a composition lately discovered, which not only hinders them from being burned, but also extinguishes the flames. He proposes to make an experiment, the time and place for the exhibition of which are to be named by the Mayor.

To this effect, he says, two small houses will be built of sixteen or twenty feet high, and ten or twelve square, painted with this composition, in the midst of and at the distance of three or four feet from twenty barrels filled with combustible materials, to which fire will be applied, which will become so violent, that it will consume in a few minutes the barrels to ashes, without in the least injuring the houses. The doors and windows of one will be open, and the fire will rage within and without; the other will be closed, and within it will be placed a cat or dog, and a cloth coat; one or two pounds of gun powder, or more, if desired, will be thrown on the floor when the barrels shall have been consumed, and it will be seen, that the houses will be perfectly uninjured.

and also all the articles contained in the one that is closed.—The heat shall be so great as to melt several pieces of lead placed on the roof, and to bend a small bar of iron, upon which a small plank, in the shape of a weathercock, will be attached.

"This paint can be made of any color, and of high finish; it is exceedingly durable, so that after several months it will be impossible to detach it except by the aid of the chisel; becoming petrified, neither the air, water, nor fire can alter it—the water which flows over it may be drunk with much benefit to the health. It will not be more expensive than the common paint which is generally used for houses. It has moreover the advantage, if laid on in several coatings, of preventing leaks in the roof."
